

How will groups form?

We recognize that it is hard to find your place in a big church such as St. Benedict. That's why small groups were developed. Small groups are the place where you will find like minded people who share your faith, and also want to grow their faith. When we see how Christ is working within others, and they see how He works within you, you all grow together.

When will we meet?

Each group will decide when, where, and how often they meet.

How will I find a group?

Registration is now open. Complete the short survey that will help us to form a group for you.

What are small faith groups?

A Place to CONNECT

Many hands make light work...that is true for our life journey too. In small groups, you will gather with others who share your faith, share your struggles, and grow with you as you explore your faith...together!

A Place to ENCOURAGE

By joining a small faith group, you gather with other like-minded Catholics to study our faith and lift each other up. Through prayer, learning and sharing, we encourage each other and hold each other accountable to make God a part of our everyday lives.

That you and I may be mutually encouraged by each other's faith.

- Romans 1:12

Group Leaders are Needed

Our small faith sharing groups are only successful if we have dedicated leaders who are willing to help facilitate the gatherings and act as a point of contact. What does this look like? We need leaders who are willing to share responsibility in order to help everyone grow, be transparent about their own struggles, and be willing to attend a training session.

A Place to GROW

When we gather together, "Where two or more are gathered in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Matthew 18:19-20. Together, in community, we grow as faith filled, Christ centered Christians who place others first, and walk humbly with God.
